The Module

Angular 2 uses a modular architecture. A module is a container for components, directives, pipes, and services. It is the basic unit of organization in an Angular 2 application.

The Template

Angular 2 uses a declarative template syntax to describe the view. The template is a string of HTML with Angular-specific syntax (bindings, directives, and pipes) that is rendered into a DOM tree.

The Component

Angular 2 components are the building blocks of an application. They consist of a class (the component class) and a template (the component template). The component class is responsible for the logic and data of the component.

The Service

Angular 2 services are classes that provide data and business logic to other parts of the application. They are created using the `@Injectable` decorator and are shared across the application.

Dependency Injection

Angular 2 uses a dependency injection container to manage the lifecycle of components, services, and other objects. It allows for the creation of a hierarchical tree of objects that can be injected into other objects.

Routing

Angular 2 routing allows you to define the structure of your application and how it is navigated. It uses a declarative syntax to define routes and components.
