

Demography and Population Growth

Introduction:

- Demography= the science of vital statistics (like birth, deaths, marriages) of population
- Political studies find interest in how these statistics change and how that affects the acquisition, distribution, and the consumption of the world's resources

World Population Rates:

- Currently stands at roughly 7.398 billion
- Keeps increasing (Highest China, India, USA, Indonesia)

1. Urbanization

- Urbanizations= movement of people from rural to urban areas
- Roughly 1/2 of the world's population today lives in cities that occupy only 2% of world's landmass, but consume 75% of the resources and produce roughly that much waste
- Impact of this shift without proper sustainability leads to further issues

2. Population Growth:

- Forecasting future population is relatively easy, projected world population in 25 years will be 8-9 billion people
- Beyond 25 years is a bit more difficult, future generation will be affected by their incomes, government, policies, and a variety of social, political, and other facts, these make projections beyond a decade relatively uncertain
- With population growth, rates of death are more complicated than birth rates, with this alone, where might such difficulties exist

3. Infant Mortality Rate:

- Infant Mortality Rate= the proportion of babies who die within the first year (out of 1000 babies)
- Effective indicator of overall health as it reflects a population's access to water, health care, nutrition, etc.
- It isn't static, and can change drastically (as access to necessities changes, socio-economic facts shift, etc.)

Thomas Malthus:

- Thomas Malthus (1766-1834)
- British writer, reverend, and English cleric who warned the population tends to increase faster
- Controversial Viewpoint:
- If famine and disease viewed as natural or beneficial, it may prevent help to those in trouble
- Many actions taken to slow population growth have been harsh, racist, and sexist (from forced sterilization to discrimination)
