

METHOD 8000A

TOTAL DISSOLVED CARBON

1.0 SCOPE AND APPLICATION

1.1 This method is used to determine the concentration of organic carbon in ground water, surface and saline waters, and domestic and industrial wastes. Some restrictions are noted in Items 1.2 and 1.3.

1.2 This method is most applicable to measurement of organic carbon above 1 mg/L.

2.0 SUMMARY OF METHOD

2.1 Organic carbon is measured using a carbonaceous analyzer. This instrument converts the organic carbon in a sample to carbon dioxide (CO₂) by either catalytic combustion or wet chemical oxidation. The CO₂ formed is then either measured directly by an infrared detector or converted to methane (CH₄) and measured by a flame-ionization detector. The amount of CO₂ or CH₄ in a sample is directly proportional to the concentration of carbonaceous material in the sample.

2.2 Carbonaceous analyzers are capable of measuring all forms of carbon in a sample. However, because of various properties of carbon-containing compounds in liquid samples, the nature of preliminary sample treatment, as well as the instrument settings, will determine which forms of carbon are actually measured. The forms of carbon that can be measured by this method are:

1. Soluble, nonvolatile organic carbon, e.g., natural sugars.
2. Soluble, volatile organic carbon, e.g., methanols, alcohols, low molecular weight esters.
3. Insoluble, partially volatile carbon, e.g., low molecular weight oils.
4. Insoluble, persistent carbonaceous materials, e.g., cellulose fibers.
5. Soluble or insoluble carbonaceous materials adsorbed or entrapped on insoluble inorganic suspended matter, e.g., silt matter adsorbed on silt particles.

2.3 Carbonate and bicarbonate are inorganic forms of carbon and must be separated from the total organic carbon value. Depending on the instrument manufacturer's instructions, this separation can be accomplished by either a simple mathematical subtraction, or by removing the carbonate and bicarbonate by converting them to CO₂ with degassing prior to analysis.

3.0 INTERFERENCES

3.1 Carbonate and bicarbonate carbon represent an interference unless the forms of this acid are first be removed or accounted for in the final calculation.
