

Worship Formation & Liturgical Resources: Frequently Asked Questions

What is the meaning and use of liturgical colors?

The words and actions of the liturgy are deeply intertwined with the colors of the vestments. These colors should be considered the best practice, the best, and most common. They are the most common colors in most liturgical and processional vestments. The colors should be used in the most common way (they are the most common in most vestment sets).

In the Christian tradition colors are used for vestments and garments (see also, What are vestments and garments and why are they used?). In a simplified system of colors developed only gradually and subsequently used and through the Middle Ages, today, the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America prescribes a system of colors for use by its congregations. For the most part, the same system is also used by Roman and Anglican churches, at least in the United States, and by many churches around the world, including the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Canada.

Many of the colors associated with the seasons are closely linked with the seasons of Christianity in the Northern Hemisphere. Christianity in the Southern Hemisphere will experience the church year differently in their context, perhaps calling forth different color associations. It is also helpful to realize that colors have different associations across the globe, just as they have had different associations even the center of the church's history. For example, white is the color North American and European Christians typically associate with Christmas and Easter, the color white signifying the purity of Christ, light or joy. In many Eastern cultures, however, white connotes mourning. Black, associated with sorrow, stood in for purple (other things in Western culture), in the color associated with purity in India.

The colors serve to show the worship space, and to call attention to the season of the season or festival being celebrated. A full summary of these usage, according to the church year, follows.

Advent Blue is associated with Advent, suggesting hope. This association originated in Scandinavia, probably because purple dye was too expensive for churches to use. Since Scandinavia was purple in Advent, a color associated with purity in the church year (the most common thing) means this is a different meaning than when it is used in Latin and Italian.

Christmas White, calling to mind the purity of the newborn Christ, and to the light and joy of the day. Some also use Gold.
