

Colour

Colour is often one of the most exciting components of a painting, but what exactly is it? Understanding the basic principles of colour theory helps you analyse how artists exploit and manipulate it to their work. They use colour together with composition, perspective, and light and shade to strengthen the impact of the artwork itself.

Mixing and comparing colours

The spectrum of light makes colour visible. Light from a source of different angles, either pure and homogeneous or from a mixture of different colours. The range of wavelengths perceived can be related to the spectrum: the shorter the wavelength, the more violet and the longer the wavelength, the more red. The spectrum is divided into primary, secondary and tertiary colours. The spectrum is divided into primary, secondary and tertiary colours. The spectrum is divided into primary, secondary and tertiary colours.

The colour wheel

Primary colours are red, yellow and blue. Secondary colours are orange, green and purple. Tertiary colours are red-orange, yellow-orange, yellow-green, green, cyan, blue, blue-violet, violet and red-violet. The colour wheel is a circular diagram that shows the relationships between the primary, secondary and tertiary colours. It is a useful tool for understanding colour theory and for creating a colour palette for a painting.

Primary and secondary
The primary colors are red, yellow and blue. The secondary colors are orange, green and purple.

Warm and cool

Warm colors are red, orange, yellow, and red-orange. Cool colors are blue, green, and purple. Warm colors are associated with fire and heat, while cool colors are associated with water and ice.

More colour mixtures
The color wheel shows the relationships between the primary, secondary and tertiary colors. It is a useful tool for understanding color theory and for creating a color palette for a painting.

Intensity
The intensity of a color is its brightness or saturation. A color with high intensity is bright and saturated, while a color with low intensity is dull and desaturated. The intensity of a color can be increased or decreased by mixing it with white or black.

Transparency
The transparency of a color is its ability to allow light to pass through it. A color with high transparency is clear and see-through, while a color with low transparency is opaque and solid. The transparency of a color can be increased or decreased by mixing it with white or black.

Value
The value of a color is its lightness or darkness. A color with high value is light and bright, while a color with low value is dark and shadowy. The value of a color can be increased or decreased by mixing it with white or black.

How artists use colour

Artists use color to create a mood and atmosphere in their work. They use color to draw the viewer's eye to a particular part of the painting and to create a sense of depth and perspective. Color is also used to create a sense of movement and rhythm in a painting.
