

1. The decline of salmon fisheries along the Columbia River in Oregon has caused great concern among commercial and recreational fishermen. The paper "Feeding of Predaceous Fishes on Out-Migrating Juvenile Salmonids" gave the accompanying data on y = maximum size of salmonids consumed by a northern squaw fish and x = squawfish length, both in millimeters. The accompanying data is from MINITAB

The regression equation is $size = -89.1 + 0.729 \text{ length}$

Predictor	Coef	Stdev	t-ratio	P
Constant	-89.09	16.83	-5.29	0.000
length	0.72907	0.04778	15.26	0.000

$s = 12.56$ $R\text{-sq} = 96.3\%$

- Interpret the slope in context of the problem
- What is the correlation coefficient?
- What value of maximum size would you predict for a squawfish whose length is 375 mm?
- What is the residual corresponding to the observation (375,165)?
- What proportion of observed variation in y can be attributed to the approximate linear relationship between the two variables?

2. A study measured the heights of husbands and wives to see if there was any relationship. The mean of the wives' heights was 64.5 inches with a standard deviation of 2.5 inches. The mean of the husbands' heights was 68.5 inches with a standard deviation of 2.7 inches. The resulting correlation was 0.5. Find the equation of the LSRL to predict the husband's height.

Ecological Statistics Gordon A. Fox, Simoneta Negrete-Yankelevich, Vinicio J. Sosa, 2015-01-29 The application and interpretation of statistics are central to ecological study and practice Ecologists are now asking more sophisticated questions than in the past These new questions together with the continued growth of computing power and the availability of new software have created a new generation of statistical techniques These have resulted in major recent developments in both our understanding and practice of ecological statistics This novel book synthesizes a number of these changes addressing key approaches and issues that tend to be overlooked in other books such as missing censored data correlation structure of data heterogeneous data and complex causal relationships These issues characterize a large proportion of ecological data but most ecologists training in traditional statistics simply does not provide them with adequate preparation to handle the associated challenges Uniquely Ecological Statistics highlights the underlying links among many statistical approaches that attempt to tackle these issues In particular it gives readers an introduction to approaches to inference likelihoods generalized linear mixed models spatially or phylogenetically structured data and data synthesis with a strong emphasis on conceptual understanding and subsequent application to data analysis Written by a team of practicing ecologists mathematical explanations have been kept to the minimum necessary This user friendly textbook will be suitable for graduate students researchers and practitioners in the fields of ecology evolution environmental studies and computational biology who are interested in updating their statistical tool kits A companion web site provides example data sets and commented code in the R language
