Paper 0530/11
Listening

Key messages

There are several multiple-choice questions in this paper and candidates must mark their answers very clearly. If candidates make a mistake, they need to cross out the answer carefully and then write the amended version, indicating clearly which their final answer is. Candidates should be advised against writing a new response over their original response as the result can be difficult to read and mark. Likewise, candidates should avoid writing their responses in pencil and then writing over them in pen as this can also make it very difficult to read. If candidates wish to write down the answers in pencil first, then they should erase them before writing in their final answer in pen.

In this paper, the focus is on comprehension and, although grammatical accuracy is not assessed, written answers must be comprehensible and unambiguous. In answers to open questions, the correct meaning must be conveyed and not invalidated by other elements.

In Sección 2, Ejercicio 1, six answers are required. If extra answers are given, these are subtracted from the total. Some candidates marked only four boxes rather than six.

In Sección 2, Ejercicio 2, Primera Parte, candidates are expected to give one-word answers. In Sección 2, Ejercicio 2, Segunda Parte, answers should be concise. Likewise, in Sección 3, Ejercicio 2, candidates must take care to read the questions carefully and to give a concise response that answers the specific question asked.

Some candidates did not know the Spanish interrogative words and would therefore benefit from further practice in this area.

Candidates need to be aware that sometimes they need to produce a verb in order for their answer to make sense.

General comments

Overall, performance on this paper was very good.

Examiners found that handwriting and legibility was sometimes a problem: if the Examiner cannot read what a candidate has written, no marks can be awarded. Some candidates wrote different vowels (e.g. o and a) in a very similar way. Candidates should be reminded of the importance of presenting their answers clearly and legibly.

This series, a few candidates left some multiple-choice questions unanswered. Leaving a multiple-choice question unanswered rules out any chance of getting a potential mark even if the candidate is not fully certain of the answer. All candidates should aim to attempt every question, as there are some questions in every section of the paper which are designed to be accessible to candidates from the whole ability range.

Candidates also need to be aware of the difference between the two letters n and ñ. The letter ñ is a distinct letter of the Spanish alphabet, representing a different sound. Therefore, omitting the tilde in the word año meant that candidates could not gain the mark for Question 25.
