Designing for Learning in an Open World Gráinne Conole, 2012-09-21 The Internet and associated technologies have been around for almost twenty years. Networked access and computer ownership are now the norm. There is a plethora of technologies that can be used to support learning, offering different ways in which learners can communicate with each other and their tutors, and providing them with access to interactive multimedia content. However, these generic skills do not necessarily translate seamlessly to an academic learning context. Appropriation of these technologies for academic purposes requires specific skills, which means that the way in which we design and support learning opportunities needs to provide appropriate support to harness the potential of technologies. More than ever before, learners need supportive learning pathways to enable them to blend formal educational offerings with free resources and services. This requires a rethinking of the design process to enable teachers to take account of a blended learning context.

Applied Learning in Higher Education: Sok Mui Lim, Yong Lim Foo, Han Tong Loh, Xudong Deng, 2020 Today all institutions of higher education almost everywhere in the world have been influenced by the concept of globalisation. The resulting policy changes in each nation state have of course reflected the degree of the impact of globalisation on the country, hence the changes in higher education. Banya 2005 p 147 This points to globalisation shaping knowledge production as well as the spread of intentional and continuous waves of innovation. The effects of globalisation on education can be seen through a) the changing paradigm from a closed system to a more open system and b) the changing approach from a teacher-centred learning environment to that of a learner-centred environment. This changing approach culminates in the broader ideas of applied learning through a) a productive view of learning versus reproductive view of learning b) constructivist versus behaviourist c) learning facilitation versus teaching and d) process-based assessment versus outcome-based assessment.
