- In a class discussion, ask students what they think about animal experimentation.
- Explain that animal experimentation is often used in psychological research. An example of this might be Ivan Pavlov's experiments with dogs.
- Divide the class into two camps: one side should be for psychological experimentation on animals and the other should be against animal experimentation.

- When students have finished, they should split into their respective camps and try to answer the following prompt: "Agree or disagree: is it necessary and ethical for humans to use animals in psychological research?"
- When each camp has finished their discussions and answered the prompt, each camp should elect a volunteer to present their argument to the class.
- In a class discussion, talk about the advantages and disadvantages of using animals in psychological experiments. Ask students to consider how using animals in experiments has an impact on people.
