Name: _____

Class: _____

Date: _____

Overview

- Neuroscience: The study of the structure and function of neurons and the brain.
- Mental Transference: The study of the mind and its relationship to the body.

Structure of a Neuron

Part	Function
Dendrites	Receive signals from other neurons and pass them to the cell body.
Cell Body (Soma)	Contains the nucleus and organelles; the site of integration.
Axon	Transmits signals away from the cell body to other neurons.
Myelin Sheath	Protects the axon and speeds up signal transmission.
Terminal Buttons	Release neurotransmitters into the synapse.
Neurotransmitters	Chemical messengers that pass signals from one neuron to another.
Synapse	The gap between two neurons where signals are passed.

Key Principles

- All-or-None Principle: A neuron fires all or nothing.
- Integration: The process of combining signals from different sources to produce a response.
- Neurochemical Process: The process of creating and releasing neurotransmitters.
- Myelination: The process of covering the axon with a myelin sheath to speed up signal transmission.

How a Neuron Fires

- Resting Potential:
 - Neuron is at a negative charge (around -70 mV).
 - Positive ions (sodium) are attracted to the cell, but the myelin sheath prevents them from crossing.
- Stimulus:
 - When a stimulus is applied, it causes a change in the membrane potential.
- Threshold:
 - If the stimulus is strong enough, it causes a change in the membrane potential that is enough to reach the threshold.
- Action Potential:
 - Once the threshold is reached, an action potential is triggered.
 - The positive ions rush into the cell, causing a rapid change in the membrane potential.
- Refractory Period:
 - After the action potential, the neuron enters a refractory period where it cannot fire again.
- Reset:
 - The neuron returns to its resting potential.
