

Radioactive Decay: A Sweet Simulation of Half-Life

INTRODUCTION

In the following procedure you will learn how to use M&M's candies to simulate radioactive decay. You will learn how to determine the half-life of a substance.

Procedure:

1. Obtain your instructor's assigned portion of the material and the starting number of M&M's candies for the activity. Record the number of candies that you start with in the table in column 1. Write your name and your date in the appropriate boxes at the end of the table with the instructor's name.

2. Place your number of candies that you were given in a container. Draw the candies one by one randomly without looking. Record whether you draw the colored candy you are to remove in the table. Each time you draw a candy, remove it. Do not return the candy to the container. Continue until you have drawn the specified number of candies.

3. Record the number of candies that you have left in the table in column 2. Repeat the activity until you have drawn the specified number of candies.

4. Determine the average half-life of your substance. Submit the data that you have collected to your instructor.
