

Fig. 22.15, surface A (shown in red) encloses the positive charge, so  $Q_{\text{enc}} = +q$ ; surface B (in blue) encloses the negative charge, so  $Q_{\text{enc}} = -q$ ; surface C (in purple) encloses both charges, so  $Q_{\text{enc}} = +q + (-q) = 0$ ; and surface D (in yellow) encloses no charges, so  $Q_{\text{enc}} = 0$ . Hence, without having to do any integration, we have  $\Phi_{EA} = +q/\epsilon_0$ ,  $\Phi_{EB} = -q/\epsilon_0$ , and  $\Phi_{EC} = \Phi_{ED} = 0$ . These results depend only on the charges enclosed within each Gaussian surface, not on the precise shapes of the surfaces.

We can draw similar conclusions by examining the electric field lines. All the field lines that cross surface A are directed out of the surface, so the flux through A must be positive. Similarly, the flux through B must be negative since all of the field lines that cross that

22.15 The net number of field lines leaving a closed surface is proportional to the total charge enclosed by that surface.

22.16 Electric Flux

22.17 The Electric Field of a Point Charge

Using Gauss's law, we can determine the electric field of a point charge. We choose a Gaussian surface that is a sphere of radius  $r$  centered on the charge. The electric field is then constant in magnitude and direction at every point on the surface.

22.18 Electric Field of a Uniformly Charged Sphere

Using Gauss's law, we can determine the electric field of a uniformly charged sphere. We choose a Gaussian surface that is a sphere of radius  $r$  centered on the sphere. The electric field is then constant in magnitude and direction at every point on the surface.

22.19 Electric Field of a Uniformly Charged Rod

22.20 Applications of Gauss's Law

Using Gauss's law, we can determine the electric field of a uniformly charged rod. We choose a Gaussian cylinder that is coaxial with the rod. The electric field is then constant in magnitude and direction at every point on the surface.

We can also use Gauss's law to determine the electric field of a uniformly charged infinite sheet. We choose a Gaussian surface that is a rectangular box that passes through the sheet. The electric field is then constant in magnitude and direction at every point on the surface.

Finally, we can use Gauss's law to determine the electric field of a uniformly charged infinite plane. We choose a Gaussian surface that is a rectangular box that passes through the plane. The electric field is then constant in magnitude and direction at every point on the surface.

These results show that the electric field of a uniformly charged infinite plane is constant in magnitude and direction at every point. This is a unique property of the electric field of a uniformly charged infinite plane.

These results also show that the electric field of a uniformly charged infinite plane is independent of the distance from the plane. This is another unique property of the electric field of a uniformly charged infinite plane.

These results are important because they show that the electric field of a uniformly charged infinite plane is constant in magnitude and direction at every point. This is a unique property of the electric field of a uniformly charged infinite plane.
