

Sweet 16 Cell Biology Tournament

With spring just around the corner, your students' attention will soon be turning to spring break, sunshine, and the NCAA basketball tournament. This activity combines the popularity of the March Madness basketball pool with a review of cell biology, including the names and locations of organelles and other unique cell features, their relative size, and how they were isolated. The result is the Sweet 16 Cell Biology Tournament. Hopefully, your students will enjoy playing the "Tournament" while reviewing these important concepts.

The rules for filling out the tournament bracket are simple. For the first round, identify whether the cell feature is found inside or outside the cell—the internal cell component wins and proceeds to the second round. In the second round, compare the relative sizes of the cell components and their visualization using microscopy. The winner in this round is the component that is not visible with 400X magnification. Semifinal competition (the third round) involves isolation of the cell components—the component that was discovered using analytical cell fractionation advances to the finals. Finally, the cell component that is able to self-replicate wins the last round to become the overall winner of the Sweet 16 Cell Biology Tournament!
