

Chapter 1 Lab Using a Microscope to Estimate Size

Problem

How can you use a microscope to estimate the size of an object?

Introduction

When you view objects with a microscope, the objects appear to be much larger than they really are. When an object is magnified, you can get a false sense of its actual size.

You can estimate the size of magnified objects if you know the size of the field of view. The field of view is the brightly lit circle you see as you look through the eyepiece of a microscope. The size of the field depends on which objective lens you are using. When you switch from a low-power to a high-power lens, you zoom in on an object. The field of view decreases as you zoom in.

In this lab, you will determine the diameter of the field of view for each objective lens. Then you will use your results to compare the sizes of a plant cell and a bacterial cell.

Skills Focus

Observe, Measure, Calculate, Predict

Materials

- compound microscope
- transparent 15-cm plastic ruler
- prepared slide of a plant root or stem
- prepared slide of bacteria

Safety

Handle slides gently to avoid breaking them and cutting yourself. Alert your teacher if you break a glass object. Review the rules for handling a microscope. To avoid electrical shocks, make sure that cords, plugs, and your hands are dry when using the light source.
