

Managing a Construction Firm on Just 24 Hours a Day

By Matthew S. Stevens

Why buy this book?

You will not find a book with as much information and practical application for construction contracting. I have worked with construction firms since 1994, traveling the continental United States (and still do). As you know, people do things differently in all regions of the country. This is no one way to manage your business. Having more than one approach makes a contractor flexible and profitable. We have captured and interpreted all these practices and present them in this book.

What you will receive:

- In-depth overview of the business of contracting
- Analysis of three major business process of every contractor
- 140+ best practices in the construction industry.
- Time saving business tactics for construction.
- Forms that help you stay organized
- Examples of reports, and other necessary management information
- Illustrations that capture insights of the business.

How this book is organized

We have divided the book in 8 major sections.

1. The Business – overview of industry, changes, and trends
2. The Estimating Process – estimating, pricing, bidding, and other work acquisition steps.
3. The Building Process – project control, project management and labor productivity.
4. The Financial Management Process – financial management, and accounting
5. People – understanding and working with industry people
6. Technology – insights into working with appropriate technology for construction.
7. Summary – our conclusions about managing a construction contracting firm on only 24 hours a day.
8. Appendix – Forms, Reports, Templates
