

Starbucks Case Study

Starbucks is a global coffee company that is known for its retail stores that sell coffee, tea, and other beverages and food items directly to consumers. However, the company is interested in expanding into the B2B market and is considering various strategies for doing so.

Case Study:

To enter the B2B market, Starbucks implemented several strategies, including the following:

1. Starbucks for Business: Starbucks for Business is a program that allows companies to offer Starbucks products to their employees or customers. This includes providing Starbucks coffee, tea, and other beverages and food items in the workplace or at corporate events.
2. Starbucks Store Solutions: Starbucks Store Solutions is a division of Starbucks that provides products and services to other businesses, including coffee beans, equipment, and consulting services. This includes helping businesses set up and operate their own coffee shops or coffee bars.
3. Starbucks VIA: Starbucks VIA is a line of instant coffee products that Starbucks sells to other businesses, such as hotels and airlines, for use in their operations.
4. Starbucks Licensing: Starbucks licenses its brand and products to other companies, such as Nestle, for use in their own products and operations. For example, Nestle manufactures and sells a range of Starbucks-branded coffee products, including coffee pods and ground coffee, in markets around the world.

Discussion Questions:

1. What are some advantages and challenges of Starbucks entering the B2B market?
2. How has Starbucks tailored its products and services for the B2B market?
3. How has Starbucks used its brand and reputation to appeal to B2B customers?
4. How has Starbucks measured the success of its B2B operations?

Answers:

1. Some advantages of Starbucks entering the B2B market include the opportunity to diversify its revenue streams and expand its customer base. Some challenges include the need to tailor products and services for the B2B market and potentially competing with other established B2B coffee suppliers.
2. Starbucks has tailored its products and services for the B2B market by offering a range of options, including coffee beans and equipment, instant coffee
