Reembedding Translation Process Research Ricardo Muñoz Martín, 2016-10-03 Reembedding Translation Process Research is a rich collection of empirical research papers investigating important new facets of the relationship between translation and cognition The common thread running through the collection is the notion of re embedding the acts of translating and interpreting and the ways we understand them That is they all aim to re situate these acts within what we now know about the brain the powerful relationship of brain and body and the complex interaction between cognition and the environment in which it is embedded Each chapter focuses on a particular aspect of the overall notion of re embedding thereby expanding the breadth of empirical research about translating This book refuses Descartes distinction between mind and brain and reaffirms the highly dynamic emergent and interactive nature of cognitive processes in translation The overarching conclusion is that translation studies should reconsider re embed any model of translation processes that arises without properly accommodating the interdependence of brain body and environment in the emergence of cognition

Developmental Issues in the Clinical Treatment of Children Wendy K. Silverman, Thomas H. Ollendick, 1999 Developmental and Clinical Issues in the Treatment of Children is the first volume to address the needs of practicing clinicians and other professionals who work in applied mental health settings. It represents the first interface of clinical child psychology, developmental psychopathology, specific child disorders, and contextual issues. This text's primary purpose is to bring these areas together to build upon the current knowledge base about children, child problems, and child treatment. In summary, this compendium integrates the major clinical and developmental issues involved in the real treatment of children. The contents of each chapter are relevant to the needs and concerns of practitioners while based on findings from the empirical literature.
