

the machine that changed the world

(Top) Computers got their big break with a pundit-defying prediction during the 1952 presidential election. Walter Cronkite (right) meets computer pioneer J. Presper Eckert (center), and UNIVAC, the machine that forecast Dwight Eisenhower's unexpected landslide victory, on Inventing the Future, airing Monday, April 13, 1992 at 9pm ET on PBS (check local listings). The program is the second of a five-part series, THE MACHINE THAT CHANGED THE WORLD, about the history of the computer and its impact on society. The series is a coproduction of the WGBH Science Unit and the BBC in association with NDR/Germany. Photo: Harry Wulforst (for editorial use only)

(Bottom) Although his famous motto was "THINK," IBM (International Business Machines) president Thomas J. Watson, Sr., did not think much of computers in the early 1950s. But his son, Thomas Watson, Jr., soon changed not only his father's mind, but IBM's future as well. Inventing the Future, airing Monday, April 13, 1992 at 9pm ET on PBS (check local listings), covers the risky early years of the computer business.
