Abstract. Nowadays enterprise information systems are designed as distributed network systems, where existing information systems and new components are connected together via a middleware. In most cases, architectures of the systems can be described informally or semi-formally by means of common design tools. But there are also critical applications where an information system is getting involved, and a formal architecture specification is necessary. This paper describes a design of a framework for distributed information systems with a mobile architecture and an outline of its implementation. The framework provides an automatic derivation of a formal specification from an implementation of system, without an explicit formal description in a design phase of project. The derived specification can be used for a quick formal proof of correctness after radical changes in an implementation phase, without a maintenance of a formal design.

1 Introduction

Nowadays information systems are in most cases designed as distributed network systems. A globalisation in a sphere of business creates need for decentralised systems with a correct data distribution, distributed processing, reservation of resources and a reliable communication infrastructure. The distributed information systems are designed as a network of communicating and partially independent components where each component performs its specific task, by itself or with help of other components. In this view, a process in the information system represents a group of components and a scheme of their interaction.

An architecture design of a distributed information system and its implementation can be very complex and difficult. Formal approaches can eliminate most failures by model checking, but they require a formal specification of architecture in a design phase of project. Unfortunately, many enterprise information systems aren't built "from scratch", they are developed as confederations of existing information systems reusing a well-established software products. In this case, a designer of a distributed information system hasn't a full control over an architecture design and a formal model often doesn't correspond to the real implementation of information system.
