Electricity

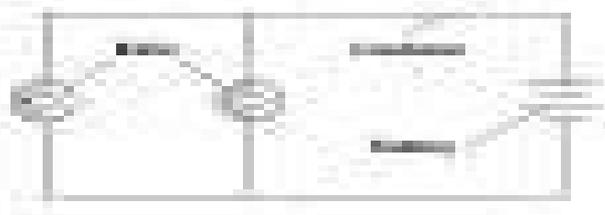

Chapter 1
Electricity

Explain the concept of resistance in a circuit.

Resistance is the property of a material which opposes the flow of electric current through it. It is measured in ohms (Ω). The resistance of a material depends on its length, cross-sectional area and the material of the conductor. Resistance is directly proportional to the length of the conductor and inversely proportional to the cross-sectional area of the conductor.

For a given material, the resistance is directly proportional to the length of the conductor and inversely proportional to the cross-sectional area of the conductor. This is expressed as $R \propto L/A$, where R is the resistance, L is the length and A is the cross-sectional area of the conductor. This relationship is used to design circuits and to select materials for conductors. For example, a long thin wire has a high resistance, while a short thick wire has a low resistance. This is why the wires in a house are made of a material with a low resistance.

Explain the difference between series and parallel circuits.

17. This is a _____ circuit.
18. This is a _____ circuit.
19. In which circuit will the brightness of the bulbs be affected if one bulb is removed?
20. In which circuit will both bulbs glow if one bulb is removed?
21. Which circuit is used in household wiring?
