LEARNING CONTENTS

Reading Interests of Children

(This part is based on Parayno,S.M. Children's Literature.. Unit 1-Lesson 2. Children's Reading Interests.)*

One of the essential factors in the development in the various phases of growth is to find children materials that suits in the needs and interests of a child. According to Parayno (n.d), a good literature brings the child into contact with great minds and various forms of experiences, increasing his knowledge of human nature and of the expanding world around him.

In order to achieve these desirable changes in the child through literature , it is necessary to know each child-- his interests, capacities, needs, and aspirations. Once the child cannot read alone one literary text, it is the responsibility of the adult (parents, teachers, librarians) to help the children find the right books and provide activities that are related to his interests and needs.

Remember that the six years of elementary of a child is the crucial stage which adult, teachers or even librarians need to develop. This is the time when a child need to develop his reading habits that will prevail until his adult life. When choosing a good book for children to read, first things first to know are the two ideas; the development of reading and the encouragement of reading pleasures.

Before jumping into the literary text applicable for children, let's take a look at these terms (Parayno, n.d).
