

Chapter 5: Textbook's Key Concepts

Intermediate and Final Goods

Intermediate: Outputs that are used as inputs from other producers in a further stage of production

Final: A good produced for consumption, investment, government, or export

- If we ignore the concept of intermediate and final goods, when calculating the value of all firms, we would get a number too large.
- This is a result of the error 'multiple counting', since goods would be counted every time they are sold from one firm to another.

Value Added

The value that a firm or worker adds to their product over and above the cost of their purchased intermediate goods.

- (Value of a firm's output) - (value of input it purchased from other firms)
- OR (Sales revenue) - (Cost of intermediate goods)
- Payments made to factors of production, like wages, are still considered a part of the firm's revenue.
 - This means that value added = payments owed to firm's factors of production.

GDP as the sum of all values added

Measure of the economy's total output during a given period

GDP from the expenditure side

Sum of expenditure needed to purchase the final output produced in that year.

- Sum of four broad categories
 1. C: Consumption expenditures
 - Household expenditures on all goods and services for final use
 2. I: Investment expenditures
 - New plant, equipment, residence, change inventories
 3. G: Government expenditures
 - Current investments
 4. X - M: Net exports
 - Exports - Imports
