

Introduction

The Global Internal Audit Standards™ require the chief audit executive to develop an internal audit charter, defined as “a formal document that includes the internal audit function’s mandate, organizational position, reporting relationships, scope of work, types of services, and other specifications.” According to Standard 6.2 Internal Audit Charter, the charter must also include the Purpose of Internal Auditing and the internal audit function’s commitment to adhering to the Global Internal Audit Standards.

This tool is a model internal audit charter, intended to be customized to reflect the operating environment of individual internal audit functions and organizations, which can vary greatly. Additionally, stakeholder expectations may influence individual internal audit charters. The model also excludes specific jurisdictional or industry-focused legal and regulatory requirements.

Each chief audit executive should customize the model charter to fit the specifications of the internal audit function agreed upon with the board and senior management. Those titles may be modified throughout this charter template to fit the circumstances.

Additionally, the chief audit executive should collaborate with the board and senior management to determine their preferred frequency for specified activities and replace the word “periodically” wherever a specific frequency has been identified. The Standards define the word “periodically” as “at regularly occurring intervals, depending on the needs of the organization, including the internal audit function.” For example, Standard 6.2 Internal Audit Charter states that “a leading practice is to review the charter periodically,” leaving the chief audit executive and the organization the flexibility to determine the review frequency that best suits their needs.

To prepare the charter, the chief audit executive must discuss with the board and senior management any current or proposed roles and responsibilities that have the potential to impair the internal audit function’s independence, either in fact or appearance. When the chief audit executive has or is expected to have one or more roles and/or responsibilities beyond
